A MAIL FROM PENANG.

Has the Editor of the Straits Echo—still remembered in Yokohama, Shanghai and Hongkong for his original line of journalistic expression been “pilled” as the Club? We ask the question in all humility after reading the following leading article in our contemporary’s issue for August 20.—

DR. PROUDMAN.

With a delicacy of expression and a tone of melancholy alike suitable to the catastrophic occasion, one of our friends writes to us of a friend that has perished with unfathomable mystery for which we are humbly grateful, the other broke it gently. Like the Poet Wilde, in circumstances not wholly dissimilar, we are abandoned to a lonely contemplation of our own unworthiness; in which self-revelation comes with an appalling sense of shock, and out of the deep we gaze at the lost brightness overclouded, prayerfully thinking of possibilities of mortal salvage.

Low as we have fallen, stooped as we are in ignominy and utter shame, we blame no man other than ourselves. We have followed too much the desires and doings of our own heart, even to the neglecting of the means of grace, and we have to confess that the decision that condemns us to outer darkness was just and right.

For us the halls of splendour, where we had thought to be permitted to gaze respectfully at the personifications of the noble and virtuous, etc., to be the seats of grace and salvation, and beauty to her, though well born, faint traces of her goodness are now but hollowed memories. Despised and rejected of men—wallow as it were in a morass of self-contempt so deep for words.

“The punishment is great, but our sin was greater. Our visual mechanism, inverted possibly by intellectual arrogance, failed to mark the intrinsic worth of the Elysium from which a flaming sword has driven back a wilderness we face in fear and trembling. Some strange spiritual blindness, perhaps not unnatural to a mere mortal wandering on Olympus, made the gods who have condemned us, appear to us as very ordinary men; and the higher, purer air failed to “wean us to other than the quite normal atmosphere of sordid earth.”

“As we have said, and say again, a just decision. Not even the angels can expect to touch pitch without soiling it; our blackness was and is indeed too patent. Perhaps, after long years of sore and sincere repentance, our heart bowed down with weight of woe, the sky of our present shameful destiny will faintly glow with a ray of hope. Elsewhere, in some other and it may be humbler clime, our disgraces unheard of, our reputation less scandalous, our character reformed, we may be permitted to resume fellowship with our own “class, unscorned and unmissed.”

$200 000 A YEAR ON JUDGES

The annual account of the receipts and expenditure in respect of the High Court of Justice and the Court of Appeal shows that for the year ended March 31, the receipts amounted to $202,200 and expenditures $164,500.

The following are some details of the expenditure of judges, $160,000.
Salaries of judges, $22,781.
Salaries of officers, $22,935.
Court expenses, $21,357.

DON'T TAKE THE RISK.

WHEN you have a bad cough or cold do not let it drag along until it becomes chronic or develops into an attack of pneumonia, and give it the attention it deserves and call on Dr. T. H. Chamberlain and Dr. H. Kennedy, and you are sure of a cure. You are by all means advised to do so.

SIDELIGHTS ON SCOTTISH HISTORY.

The muniment rooms of the old Scottish nobility, and the principal gentry of the Northern kingdom, like their counterparts in England, are furnishing the Historical Manuscripts Commission with a wealth of good material throwing valuable sidelights on the history of the land and its peoples as well as of its Kings,

Queens, and Princes. Just recently a volume has been issued based on the records taken from the family papers of

Sir Archibald Edmonstone of Dunreath,

Sir John James Graham of Fintry, and

Colonel Montagu Hay of Duns Castle.

Of these Scottish papers the most interesting from the point of view of general history are probably those belonging to the Edmonstone family.

In these are included many letters and documents relating to State and international affairs. One of the most valuable from our present point of view is an order by King James IV, dated

Edinburgh, July 13th, 1512, in which he requests his "beloved count" WILL-IAM, Lord Livingston, to send some of his young men to France to assist the French King in his wars. The terms of the order are as follows:—"I commend it to you to teach

"couch" it begins, "as we write to you before like as we did to the love of the lions of our land." The young able young men well fitted to pass in our ships with our army to help or our army, and serve the King of France; and as we are informed, your enemies, the men from the mid-troves, refuse to let us go to France, we will therefore have to go to Scotland, and you think most certain to do so. We say, the said army that they accept the same, and be ready thereunto under the pain of rebellion." It is apparent that the alliance existing between France and Scotland in those far off days was a very real alliance. We are reminded, indeed, by many of the documents in these Edmonstone papers of the close relation which subsisted for many generations between France and Scotland down at least to the Restoration. Two instances may be cited. One is a letter, in French, written by Mary Queen of Scots to her mother, the Queen Dowager, when the young Queen was probably about twelve years of age. It begins:—"I am very glad to have the means of writing you my news, since I was in great trouble at not having heard yours for so long, and goes on to express the young Queen's pleasure in learning that the Duke of Chattemerleau and the principal Scottish nobles have made their submission. The rest of the letter is occupied in telling her mother that her uncle the Cardinal has advised her to receive the Sacrament for the first time. "I pray very humbly," adds Mary, "that God will give me the grace to make a good beginning."

The second document which connects the Royal House of Stuart with France is a copy of a declaration submitted to the King and Council of France in 1551 by Charles, offered an explanation of the unfortunate ending to his descent upon Scotland. "The knowledge I had," he says, "of the desire of my Scots subjects for their restoring of me to my due rights and dignities, intimated to me by the late Treaty of the Commissioners at Breda, was the thing that induced me to cast myself upon them; but from the first hour of my coming amongst them I found nothing but division and the spirit of envy, till my retiring from them, and even at the last fight of Worcester so great were the distinctions that not half of the Scots army engaged against the enemy." Charles offers an explanation of the unfortunate ending to his descent upon Scotland. ## FASHIONABLE WEDDING AT ST. JOHN'S CATHEDRAL.

Derby—Scobell-Clay.

A very pretty wedding was solemnised at St. John's Cathedral this morning, when Miss Edith Scobell-Clay was married to Dr A. T. Davy, R.N.

The cathedral was tastefully decorated for the occasion and there was a large congregation to witness the tying of the nuptial knot. The Rev. O. Hughes, R.N., officiated assisted by the Rev. F. T. Johnson, M.A., chaplain of the cathedral.

The bride, who was given away by Deputy Inspector General Tait, was attired in corded silk trimmed with beautiful Brussels lace and pearl passant-motifs with a tulip val over a tier of orange blossoms. The bridesmaids, Miss Rose, Matilda Hospital, and Miss Tait; Naval Hospital, had charming white embroidered muslin and sequined dresses and wore bouquets of the bridegroom's gold naval crown brooches. The latter was attended by Dr Fitzwilliam as groomsman. The bride also carried a bouquet of white lilies of the valley while the bridesmaids had pink bouquets. The bridesmaids hats were trimmed with roses and sheer lace.

The officers present formed an arch of honour, holding their crossed swords over the happy pair as they passed down the aisle.

After the ceremony a reception was held by Dr and Mrs Tait, at the Naval Hospital. Subsequently the happy pair left for Macao and Canton where the honeymoon will be spent.

The bride's travelling dress, was made of white embroidered muslin with a bat trimm'd with white rose and sheen corn.

Guests invited included—Dr Fitzwilliam; Engineer Commander and Mrs Mountbatten; Mr. and Mrs. Kiesland; Mr. and Mrs. Smith; Mr. and Mrs. Holworthy; Mr. and Mrs. Eardine; Mr. and Mrs. Wright; Mr. Jackson; Capt. and Mrs. Craig; Misses Innes, James, Rose, Matilda Hospital; Mr. and Mrs. Knott; Mr. and Mrs. Sayles; Capt. & Mrs. Stewart; Capt. and Mrs. Collingwood; Capt. & Mrs. Dooner; Mr. and Mrs. Bailey; Comptore, Mrs. and Miss Lyon; Sisters R. ## RAMBLING NOTES.

I hope Dr. Cook will be able to make good his story that he discovered the North Pole on the 21st April, 1905, in the manner of his reputed achievement rather than as a campaign, or blowing of trumpet, for sensational interviews are the lot of the lonely regions of Elsewhere Land. Quietly he disappeared into the unknown, and almost as quietly he has returned. Dame Rumour says that the world at large is sceptical of his having won the prize which has been withheld from scores of gallant men these last four hundred years. If he is an honest man his tale will in the end carry conviction. Meanwhile there is the doubt.

It may not be generally known that the North Pole was claimed to have been discovered by an English sailor some time in the late fifties of the last century. Early in 1850 a very circumstantial tale was told in all the newspapers that a party of wandering Esquimaux had brought to trade in the Hudson's Bay territory a bundle of discoloured papers. On these being opened they were found to contain the story of a man named John North, who claimed to have been a member of Sir John Franklin's ill-fated expedition, serving before the mast on the Erebus. After the tragic death and burial of Sir John, the supposed writer of the narrative determined to make a shot for the Pole and he set about the task very methodically.

Getting away to the northward he fell in with wandering Esquimaux and persuaded them to pilot him further on his quest. One tribe passed him on to another until he reached the utmost limits that the Esquimaux would go. They said that the places beyond were too terrible for any human being to traverse: that they were the abode of evil demons who devoured men, and they positively refused to advance farther. In fact the North Pole was not so far as they were concerned. Notwithstanding, North determined to push on alone and though he suffered great privations he eventually won through.

One evening he approached what looked like a dark della between two mountains of ice. Hurrying forward he entered the forbidding place, which, in accordance with the nature of the adventure, grew ever darker and more terrible. Suddenly there was a turn and North saw daylight afield. A few steps more and he was looking down upon a beautiful sunlit country, alive with towns and villages and splendidly cultivated. It was surrounded, just like a cup, with huge walls of rock and ice. Soon he made his way down into the enchanted plain and by using signs and Esquimaux words he got into communication with the inhabitants. He found them fairly intelligent, but priest-ridden and a thousand years behind the civilization of Europe. After some years spent in this land, North tried to effect his escape, but was prevented by the priests, so in default he managed, after most incredible adventures, to write his narrative and send it through the polar barrier and thence it was passed on by the Esquimaux to Hudson's Bay.

Needless to say such intrepid and experienced Arctic explorers as Sir William McIlroy, Sir John Narves and others who told the story threw doubt upon its authenticity and before many years had flown North's narrative was entirely forgotten. I chance upon it the other day when looking for some books dealing with the Arctic regions, and was rather struck with the naive impossibility of the yarn. The man who spun it originally was gifted with a splendid imagination, of that there can be no doubt, while he also must have had no inconsiderable number of books dealing with the polar regions to be so conversant with the conditions which there prevail. But he ought to have brought North back to civilization not left him at the Pole dreaming of the English watermeadow such time as he dressed his life away propped up on beds of amaranth and moly." But there, we are not all Rider Haggards.

The beautiful weather of the past month, though ideal from a bathing party's point of view, must have occasioned some anxiety for the Water Authority. It really looks as if there will be a very considerable shortage of rain this year, and yet there is any amount of water going to waste all through the Colony. The police could stop a good deal of this waste if the Chinese laukongs could be induced to wake up a bit.

Already there is an stir in sporting circles in the Colony preparatory to Autumn activities. The cricket clubs are beginning work at the practice nets, while the human material, at the disposal of the various clubs, is being eagerly scanned in view of the interclub fixture in November. We ought to be able to put up a fairly respectable show against Shanghai and the Straits, given only decent luck. The League, I understand, will be again well supported, though the Telegraphs will probably have to drop out. I hope the Kowloon men will put up a better display of cricket, and come off better than they did last. They have a beautiful ground and large membership, but last year's performances were not a credit to either.

From Australia comes the news that Dr. Doyle, the Roman Catholic Bishop of Newcastle, New South Wales, left an estate valued at one million and six hundred thousand dollars (22,000 £12,500) to his son, Mr. John Doyle, of Liverpool, England. Mr. John Doyle, however, died in August, 1908, before his father, and his son, Dr. John Doyle, succeeded him.

He has served seven and a half years of his sentence. Doyle was sentenced in company with Dr. George Godwin, a well-known Australian, for the murder of a man named John Johnson, in 1903.

He was sentenced to 14 years imprisonment.

SEVERE TEETHING RASH CURED

Spread Over Body and Face—Baby Scratched and Rubbed Till it Bleed and Caused Great Pain and Agony
—First Bath with Cuticura Soap Brought Sleep—Cure Followed.

MOTHER FINDS GOOD FRIEND IN CUTICURA

"I first started using Cuticura Ointment about two and a half years ago for my little boy. When a few months old, it brought him a severe rash, which he had to scratch and rub until it bled, which made him very irritable, especially at night. I used to scratch and rub until he had to take a bath with Cuticura Soap and it relieved all the pain. I thought I would try Cuticura Soap again, so I bought a small amount and gave it to my baby. He seemed quite soothed and slept well.
I applied a little Cuticura Ointment every night and after about a month's treatment with two baths a week, the rash was gone. Since then, I have kept to Cuticura Soap and no other.
I hope you will let me know if Cuticura
Soap is good for babies."
